New Model-Code Configurations for Eaton Vickers-Brand Open-Circuit Piston Pumps—The Process Continues

Integration of Vickers-brand pump products into the Eaton organization has resulted in a number of key improvements to the product model-coding approach. Eaton business systems use unique model codes to ensure products are built to each customer's requirements and error-free feature details are provided. In addition, unique model-code structures facilitate product configurator and automatic pricing software packages.

New Coding Structure for H Series Design Pumps

Eaton Engineering has released new fixed-length codes for H Series PVH open-circuit products. The release of the new PVH unit codes follows those issued for PVE/PVQ models last month.

Active units in the Eaton ordering system will retain the Vickers-pattern assembly number to provide linkage to the new model-code structure. Any new models established will use the Eaton-pattern assembly number.

No Pricing Changes

The change only impacts the model codes. There are no associated changes to prices for H Series PVH units.

Cross-Reference List

To assist you in determining your new model codes, please refer to the attached list that cross-references assembly numbers, Vickers models, and the new Eaton models.

Build-Date Code Example

Following is an example a new stamped/printed build-date code:

24902IA1-5065

The first three digits, 249, indicate the day of the year the product was manufactured. The next two digits, 02, represent the year. The 6th, 7th, & 8th characters, IA1, indicate the state abbreviation for the Eaton manufacturing facility and the plant number (Plant #1 is Spencer). The four digits at the end indicate the production sequence number, which starts each production day at 5,000. Hence, this was the 65th pump built on the 249th day of 2002 at the Spencer, Iowa, facility.

For warranty issues or questions concerning products, Eaton requires customers to provide the build-date code and the assembly number, in order to expedite our response.

Questions

Questions regarding model-code configurations should be directed to your Open-Circuit Piston Product Manager.

New Model-Code Structure

Eaton's new Vickers model codes are based on a 32-character, fixed-length pattern that fully defines the features for each pump. The codes are listed in the following cross-reference list that will be included in the revised PVH catalog. For more specific product details, please refer to Eaton Engineering Documents ESP-022 SEC. 142.1.
